Townsend Items.

The thunder-shower last Monday was a flood. Every drop would turn a mill.

It must be an accomplished mechanic who would rather sweat in a hay field for $1.50 a day than work at his trade for five dollars.

A wagon from Sonora arrived here Monday with a lot of truck that could not be sold elsewhere. When these peddlers find themselves stuck with a load of jolted-up trash they head for Lundy, and find a market.

The civil engineers who reconstructed the Lake Canyon road, having earned their money like slaves and spent it like princes, have struck out for the valleys, to shovel the fragrant hay and replenish the sack for another protracted booze.

The other day Buck Burnside and others were playing poker at the Lakeview when a terrific clap of thunder ripped the heavens wide open and seemed to upset the mountains. With bleached faces the startled gamblers grabbed their stakes and lit out like scared deer, thinking, as they hurried away, that a snow-slide was after them.

Get Your Axles Recut.

Attention is called to the advertisement on the first page of Jos. Fusch, who is prepared to recut axles of all sizes, for a reasonable charge. The wheels of all vehicles become loose on the spindle after one or two years' use, caused by friction. On a common straight axle the box is worn on each end, also the nut and collar, which leaves the spindle on the point of axle even with the box, and running the thread up to it and cutting off the point that would protrude through the nut, the wheel is made to fit again like when new, providing the spindle is not worn too flat.

Could Not Read His Own Letter.

The following story is told on a well-known Carson lawyer: A few weeks ago the attorney visited Hawthorne and met one of his clients who handed him a letter to read. The attorney put on his spectacles, glanced at the document, turned it over and upside down, but could not make out a word. He began to curse the fellow who wrote it, but when told that it was his own chirography he nearly fainted. "The reading of that letter," said his client, "was plain sailing compared with the one you wrote to me last week. Had it not been that you signed your name with a rubber stamp I would never have known who it came from. Being unable to make it out and thinking you had compromised my case and secured an order for a few hundred dollars for me, I took it down to Judge Al. McCarthy to read and see what it meant. It was a hard task for the Judge and he finally decided that he would go to Virginia City and consult an encyclopedia. He is there yet. I took it to District Attorney Bowler next. Mr. Bowler is at Soda Springs now trying to regain his health. I began to think, and like a flash a brilliant idea crossed my brain. I darted down the street to the Bulletin office like a race horse, climbed to the fourth story five steps at a time, snatched off the cover of the phonograph, pasted your letter on one of the rolls, shot the roll into place and turned the crank. In a few seconds I heard your voice coming from the very depths of the phonograph and this is what it said: 'Extend my hearty congratulations to Al. McCarthy on his appointment to the Judgeship of Hawthorne.' Two hours afterwards I was found in a dazed condition with my hand still on the crank." The Carson lawyer has purchased a typewriting machine and is now learning how to manipulate it.

Accident to Two Carson Prospectors Near Lundy.

Last Saturday Edward De Witt had a very close call, says the Homer Mining Index. He was going up Lake Canyon road in a buckboard loaded with a prospector's outfit, and Sam Calvin was walking ahead. By some unaccountable wee-waw the wagon went off the grade. Sam hung to the horse, and the latter clung to the bank like a jaybird until the tugs broke, when down went the wagon several hundred feet into the canyon, all in a grand smash. De Witt went with it, and was found at the bottom fearfully battered and bloody. He was in a bad condition, looking like he had had a dog fight with a threshing machine. He will be partially well in a few weeks, but the record of the adventure will remain on his head and face, and the broader parts of him. If the slit at the corner of his mouth don't heal up he can't drink beer out of a road-scraper.
